STATE RESTRICTIONS FOR SHORT BARRELED RIFLES
Short barreled rifles are legal, but are regulated by federal law and on a state-by-state basis. Check your local and state laws before ordering. All NFA rules apply.
While the 100% made in the U.S.A. Century Arms RAS47 maintains the iconic look of the traditional AK-47 that is recognizable worldwide, it incorporates modern attributes that lend to its efficient operation. From the black nitride coating and extended magazine release to its “repeatable zero” optics rail, this rifle was built to win. American engineering and manufacturing processes matched with the reliability and durability of the AK’s design have created what I consider to be the best mass produced AK-47 rifle on the market today.

I have had my RAS47 for over a year and have fired more than 10,000 documented rounds through it in some of the most grueling conditions imaginable. The rifle has performed exemplary on the “square range” as well as while bounding across the landing zone during Tactical Response’s “High Risk Civilian Contractor” classes. The RAS-47 has never let me down. Real usage in the toughest conditions have instilled the confidence I need in this rifle. For harsh training, or for defense, the RAS47 has earned its place as my “go-to” AK.

Choosing a suitable “Go To” rifle can be complicated for those who are survival minded. There’s always the popular Semi-Auto offerings that work well for most applications, but are typically lacking in the long range area or not suitable for taking medium to large game. In a survival situation, having a rifle that can handle as many situations as possible is critical.

The C308 from Century Arms can fulfill about any situation you could face. Yes, it’s heavier than your typical AR or AK, but the ballistics are far superior and the price is very attractive. The robust action and years of battlefield experience show that it stands up to a lot of abuse and keeps on running. Even though .308 ammo cost a little more than medium range calibers, the benefit of the round over 5.56 or even 7.62x39 is well established and because of the popularity of .308, the availability is strong. Magazines are very reasonable and spare parts are abundant.

Recoil is moderate because of the Chevron Muzzle brake and the controls are pretty intuitive. Disassembly is straightforward and simple. Another big advantage of the C308 is the integral picatinny rail on the top of the receiver for mounting optics.

Overall the C308 is a solid choice for Home defense or when SHTF. When it comes to protecting my family, I want firepower and this rifle is a beast.
